

Customer Notes

- Wondering about UI for file uploading, asking about drag and drop, which might not be possible on the free version of plugins (They're more comfortable with a one-time payment rather than an annual one)
- An option for users to show if they're going to an event or not
- Also liked the idea that events have a location, and it opens a google map to that location
- Wondering about a way to subscribe to RMO's calendar on Apple Maps/Google Calendar

Notes from our presentation

- Wondering about multiple user accounts, it currently is possible to have multiple accounts with one password, but not the same as multiple roles per user
 - Did say there's a plugin for it, but that it wasn't installed (include in plugin list)
- Concerned about formidable form payment structure, wondering about what differentiates posts from forms and how they're currently displayed
 - Need to include some of it in project report
- Back to others
- Like the fact that the menu works with the user's section and only their section (It also works with multiple user accounts)
- Curious about the form for adding posts, and if uploading works
- Wondering about rationale for two step logout
- Asking about nicknames vs usernames
- Wondering about how much potential damage a admin (or administrator) could do to the site (a lot)
- Asking about a help button with contact information so users who need help with the site can send an email to a designated person
- Asking about announcements tab
- Asking about how content on the site wraps/adapts to varying screen sizes
- Wondering about design decision to use a certain free plugin rather than a blog, comparing if it's worth it
- Asking about what codeSnippets is used for, and its utility compared to how visible announcements are compared to posts
- Asking about needing to add in emails, and how they're potentially used as usernames
- Wondering about the free solution for uploading music (in this case, putting in all the emails) so they get properly sent to users. Preferred spending $50
- Asking if that solution also involves adding sheets to the archive, it does require a separate action
- Concerned about plug-in functionality
- Curious about why we didn't just use blog posts by themselves (we couldn't get them to auto generate without a plugin)